For gallantry in action at St. Etienne, France, Oct. 8, 1918. During the assault when several of the company commanders had been wounded, Major Morrissey under exceedingly heavy machine-gun and shell fire took command of the assault line, personally organized platoons whose commanders had been wounded and also organized many other men who had become lost from their companies, appointed commanders and sent them forward into action. His example of coolness and leadership under fire inspired the men of his battalion and contributed largely to the success of the operations.
